Rev. Smith Reports on Trip to Cuba

The Rev. Aaron D. Smith, pastor of the Appomattox Methodist Circuit, returned to Appomattox last Sunday, Feb. 8, after a rewarding experience as one of a group of 133 Methodist ministers participating in a Methodist Evangelistic Crusade in Cuba.

The Crusade was under the direction of Bishop John Branscomb, of the Florida area, and Dr. Harry Denman, of Nashville, Tenn., Crusade Director.

There are 80 Methodist Churches in Cuba, organized into six districts, and two ministers of the Crusade group led services in each church.

The Crusade began Jan. 29 and ended Feb. 6.

Rev. Smith expressed satisfaction concerning the Crusade results. There were about 450 professions of faith, and over 2,000 enrolled in training classes for membership. About 87,000 persons heard the gospel during the Crusade, which has been an annual event since 1950.

Rev. Smith participated in services at churches at the town of Baina and Camito, some 25 miles from Havana.

Due to having daily services, Rev. Smith had only limited time for touring in Cuba, but he did visit Havana. He found the people of Cuba very friendly and hospitable, and stated that they hold Americans in high esteem. He made over 10 visits into the homes of the people, and enjoyed meals with them.

All activities such as visiting, eating, shopping, preaching and social contacts during the Crusade called for the aid of an interpreter. This makes one realize the language barrier when one goes to a foreign country. He found that even that in spite of this, one is amazed at how successfully one can make acquaintances and friendships. He was especially pleased that a group of friends came out to the airport to bid him goodbye upon leaving the Island.

He said, "There is a communion of the human spirit, regardless of barriers of country and language."

Rev. Smith also preached in one private home and in a mission training school while there.

One of the highlights of his trip was several visits to Havana. This is a huge city of over one million population. He remarked that if one thinks our traffic problem is vexing, one should visit Havana. He spoke of the traffic confusion, disorganization and horn blowing in Havana. He visited and took pictures of the National Capitol and of the statue of Marti, who helped liberate Cuba, and is a national hero.

The customs of the people there are different from ours, and one has to become adjusted to their food and way of life. The diet features rice, friend bananas, green tomatoes, highly seasoned meats, and very, very strong coffee.

Rev. Smith took pictures and slides during his trip, and will make reports on hi exeperiences to his congregations here. He states that his trip was made possible through the generosity of his congregation and friends here, to whom he is grateful for having had the opportunity to participate in the Crusade.

Homemakers Items

Electric grills and waffle irons should be left open to cool, says the Extension Service. To keep the grill or iron from becoming rancid during storage, place a piece of clean, unprinted paper between the cooking surfaces.

Never use small electric appliances on the drainboard of the sink. Wet hands, wet terminals or moisture in the inside wiring of cords invite injury to yourself and damage to the appliances.

New iron skillets which are not marized "pre-seasoned" should be reasoned before they are used. To do this, place a little unsalted fat in the skillet and heat it in the oven for several hours at a low temperature.

The average American family of two eats a little more than $31 worth of food each week. This figure was obtained through a nationwide survey of 6,000 households by the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

The amount spent varies depending upon income, the number of people in the family, and to some extent their ages. With the number in the family averaging 3.6, food for a day in the survey families had a value of $1.25 a person. Since the survey was taken, food prices have risen 2%, so a survey today would likely show average food value of almost $1.30 a day per person.

Health and Beauty

You probably have your own pet diet and you may be one of those lucky ones who can determine to go on a diet and stick on it until the desired results are obtained. After this you are on your own, and far too many of us have trouble retaining the correct weight after a diet.

There is a basic set of rules you can follow that will help you to stay "just where you are" on the scales. For a normal, well-balanced diet that will keep your eyes bright and your weight steady, you should have every day:

A big serving of meat
Milk
Citrus fruit (eat as much as you want of the above, and add:)
Butter or fortified margarine
White, root and other vegetables
All fruits and berries
Oils and other fats
Breads
Sugar and other sweets.

If you find your weight creeping up you may be sure you are taking in more calories than your body needs, and it is time to cut down on the last six items in the above list. Particularly the sugars and fats.

We believe that you should get a dict of unrefined foods which includes lots of lean meats and fish, fresh vegetables and fruits, skim milk or buttermilk and a vitamin supplement each day. The sweets in your diet should come from natural sources, such as honey. Butter is desired over margarine, except where a doctor has said differently.

Refined starches are out. Eat baked potatoes, brown (unpolished) rice and cereals in place of pastry, spaghetti and bread.

Once you get into the habit of eating this way — you will never be tempted to return to your old eating habits.

QUESTIONS OF THE WEEK

(Editor's note: Here are the questions asked most frequently by Virginia farmers during the past week, as reported by county agricultural agents. Staff members of the VPI Agricultrul Extension Service and/or Experiment Station supply the answers).

Q. Am I justified in using 10-10-10 fertilizer as a topdressing for small grains instead of nitrogen alone?

A. Generally topdressing with nitrogen alone is preferred. If phosphate and potash are low, there will be some benefit in applying the 10-10-10, but not as much as if it had been applied at seeding time. Some farmers apply 10-10-10 as a topdressing for the benefit of crops succeeding small grains.

Q. Will there be any more money available for soil bank purposes this year?

A. Likely none above the present appropriations in view of great pressures on the budget.

Q. What is the best material to use and when do you apply it to control chickweed in alfalfa?

A. Use 2 to 3 pounds of chloro IPC in 20 gallons of water per acre during the doramnt season.

Q. What should I feed to beef cows that are now thin as they have been getting only poor quality grass silage?

A. Feed good quality legume hay if it is available, if not, feed 4 to 5 pounds of corn and cob meal daily; and if your silage has no legumes in it, add about a pound of protein supplement.

MORE ANIMALS PER ACRE . CAN MEAN MORE DISEASES

More animals per acre (the modern-day trend) can also mean more disease trouble, if the farmer does not follow some preventative practices, say veterinarians at VPI.

They point out that when a disease outbreak does occur, it is more severe where livestock populations are concentrated than where there are few animals.

The trend toward more animals per acre has brought along with it more emphasis on preventive medicine. If every farmer would use his veterinarian first to outline a program to prevent animal maladies and then follow that program faithfully, instead of waiting until trouble looms before calling for medical help, he would get more per dollar spent for veterinary aid than he does at the present time, the specialists say.

Procedures will vary with individual farms, but generally speaking, the specialists say to:

1. Isolate for 30 to 60 days all animals bought before adding them to the herd; then retest them for TB, brucellosis, etc., as seems indicated.

2. Raise calves under proper conditions (individual pens, or pens for only a limited number, etc.)

3. For hogs, use the rountine vaccinations available, and provide proper farrowing quarters.

4. Attend to cleanliness, sanitation, and proper nutrition — important safeguards against disease.

SOUTHEASTERN DEER IN GOOD HEALTH

Eleven southeastern states, including Virginia, recently set up a Cooperative Deer Disease Study, with headquarters at the University of Georgia. The objectives of this group consisted of learning as much as possible about disease to which deer are susceptible.

In a recent news release received by the Virginia Commission of Game and Inland Fisheries, the news bureau of the University of Georgia reported that during the past six months blood samples have been obtained throughout these 11 states looking for two known killers of unborn deer — leptospirosis and brucellosis. Apparently the southeast herds are in good health since neither of these diseases has been found.

KNOW THE WEATHER

By E. H. Sims

What does smoke tell us about the coming weather? Does soot sometimes play the role of weather forecaster?

Both smoke and soot sometimes indicate the nature of approaching weather. Most often they tell of approaching rain and bad weather. Smoke that curls downward from a smokestack indicates instable weather, probably rain or even a storm.

Soot which falls down a chimney into a fireplace below indicates a falling barometer, and the approach of rain.

Smoke that rises steadily, not necessarily vertically, indicates good weather ahead. Vertical smoke columns reveal a lack of wind, or frontal movement; this sign could mean that no weather change is imminent for a day or so in winter; through summer the value of a smoke column as a weather indicator is highly questionable.
